OUR FLAG

You and I were strangers
Yet we became the best of friends
But should you disgrace my Flag, old friend
That's where our friendship ends.
My brother gave his life for you for you and all mankind
So before you burn that grand old Flag you'd best keep that in mind.
The Flag may not mean much to you as it waives against the sky
But to get the kind my parents have the price is awfully high.
So should your seats need mending or your drapes begin to sag You'd better think it over friend before you use that Flag.

By William Tallman . . . 1968

who lost his brother in the war.)
